SWIMM

SHOOT

EDITION
2003

“Uzi”

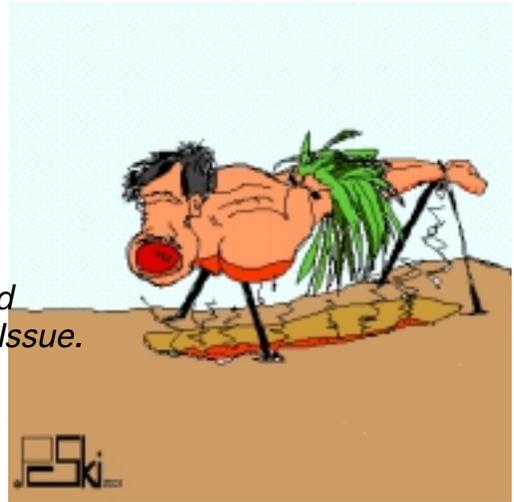

A hand pistol packing
itsy bitsy tinie winie
white bikini.

Quote: “I can handle rapid fire. Can you handle me?”

Every winter, when the North wind howls, and the doors get frozen shut, and the snow begins to pile up on the walkways, your mind begins to drift like the snow packed streets, to warmer, different, and more exciting places. It is also a semi-boring time of the calendar year, so you have to spice it up with something. Anything. As editor, I have to present the first and only brand spanking new, Real News SWIM SHOOT Issue.

“Assault”

From an Irish radical father and a French socialist mother, this model is all the rage in her classic Sandra Dee polka dot ‘kini and classic semi-automatic assault rifle.

Quote: “I’d kill for a man. And I have in the past.”

“Bondi”

No secret about this agent who can't pack away her Walter PPK in that tight neon bikini.

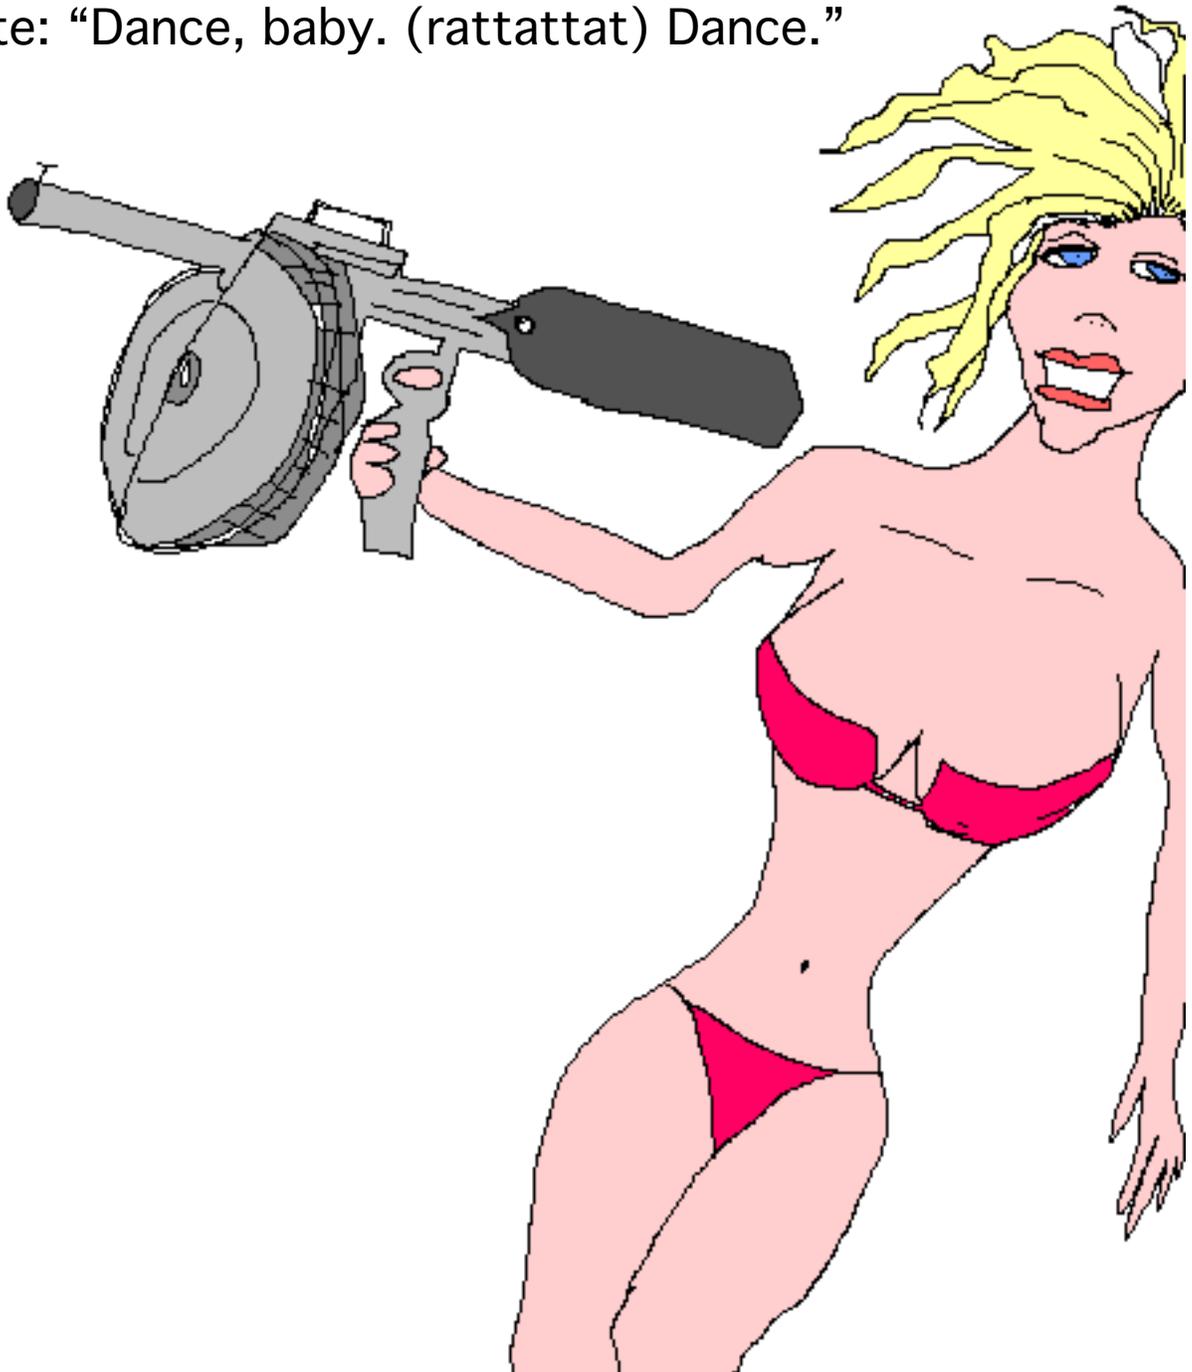

Quote: “James, who?”

“Gatt”

If the Roaring 20s comes back again, Gatt would be the life of the party with this retro raspberry halter top.

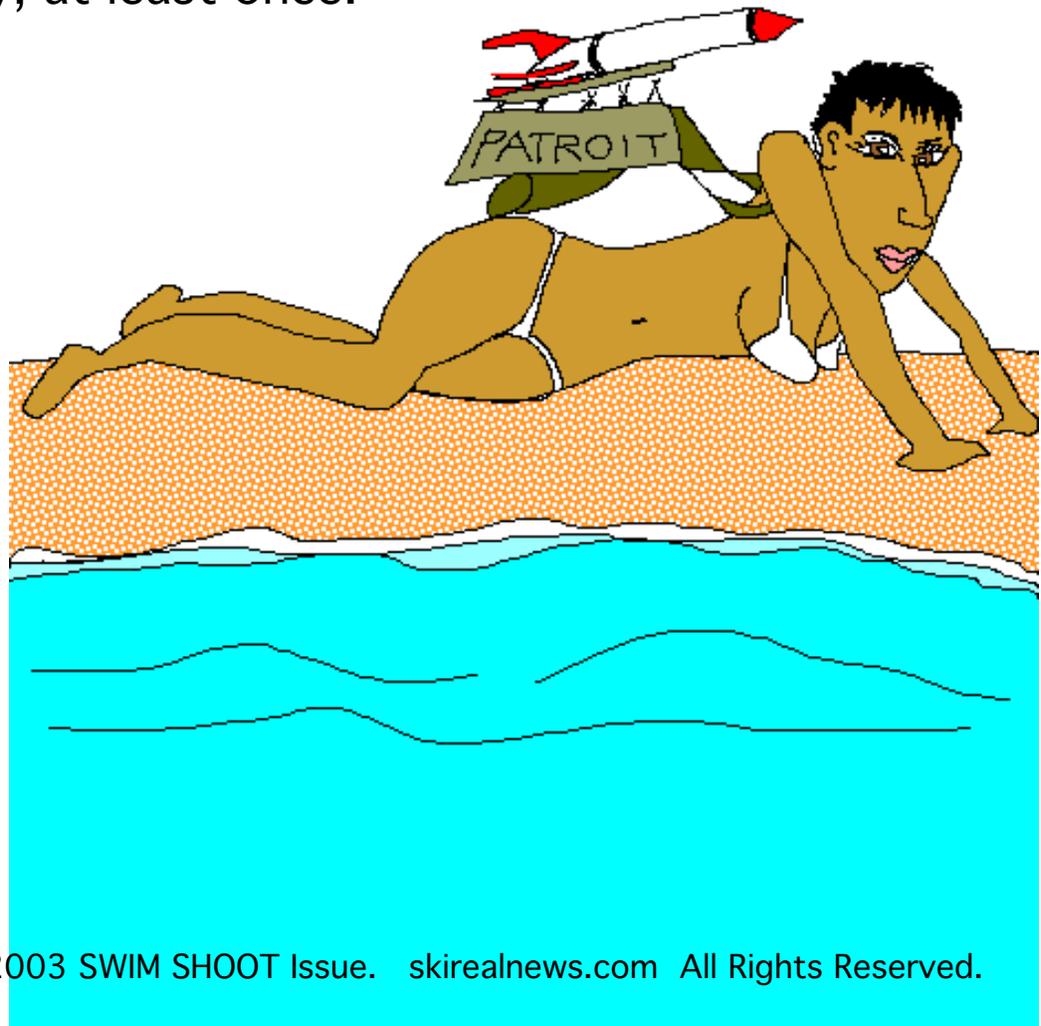

Quote: “Dance, baby. (rattattat) Dance.”

“Missy”

She is backpacking a prototype portable Patriot missile system for her country in this time of high alert. The Patriot missile is color coordinated with her swimsuit so as not to draw too much attention on the beach. Like that’s not gonna happen.

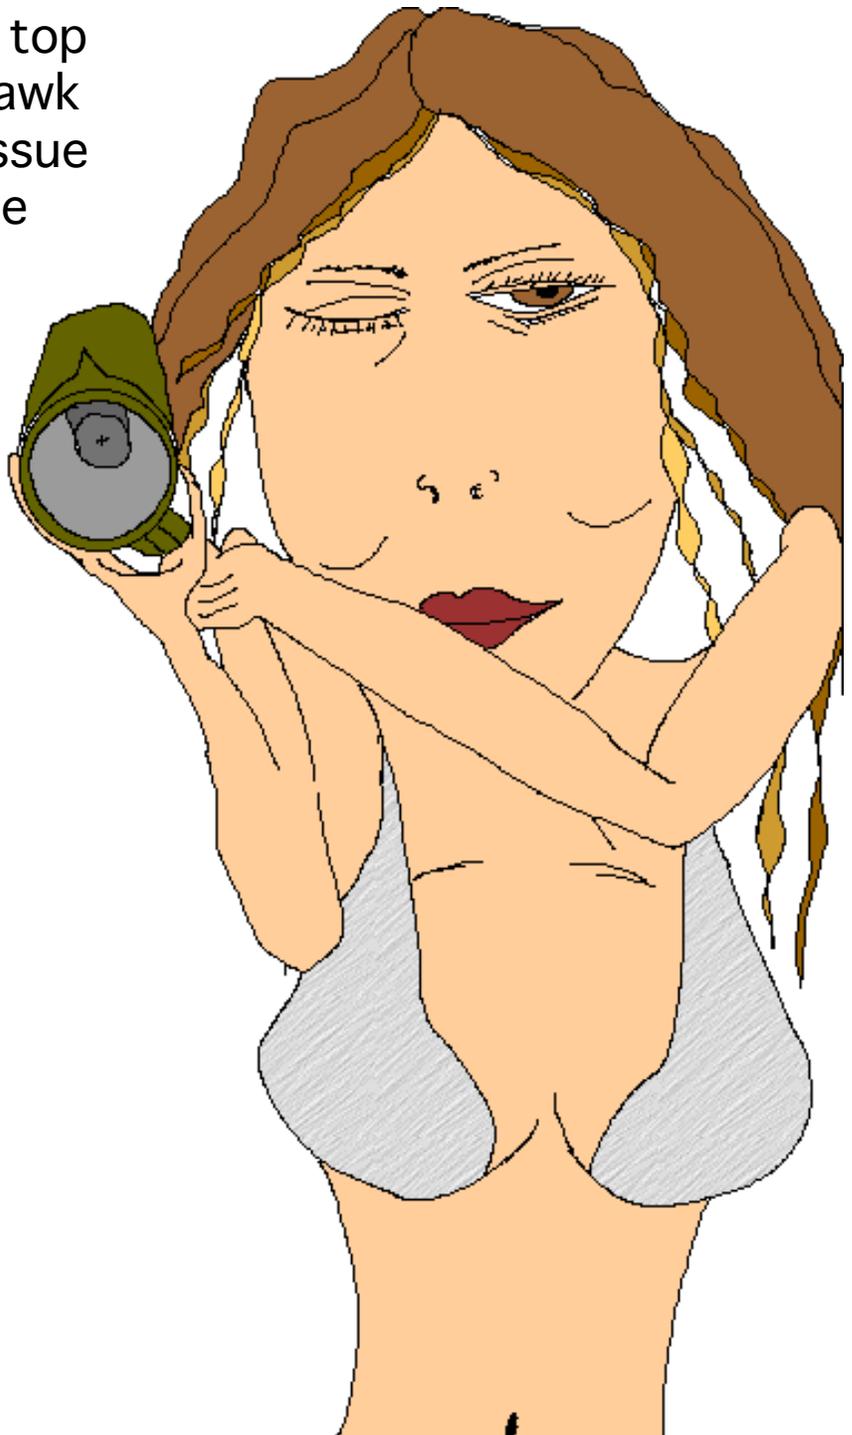

Quote: “I’d do anything for my country, at least once.”

“Sam”

She takes dead aim with her classic knit bathing top with the eye of a hawk with her standard issue surface to air missile launcher.

Quote:
“I pick out what I like, and I aim for it.”

“Khakia”

She will sneak up to you in her jungle fatigue low cut one-piece swimsuit and mow you down with her fully automatic light machine gun.

Quote:

“I am an introvert who likes to hide in the shadows until I feel comfortable to let loose on the whole room.”

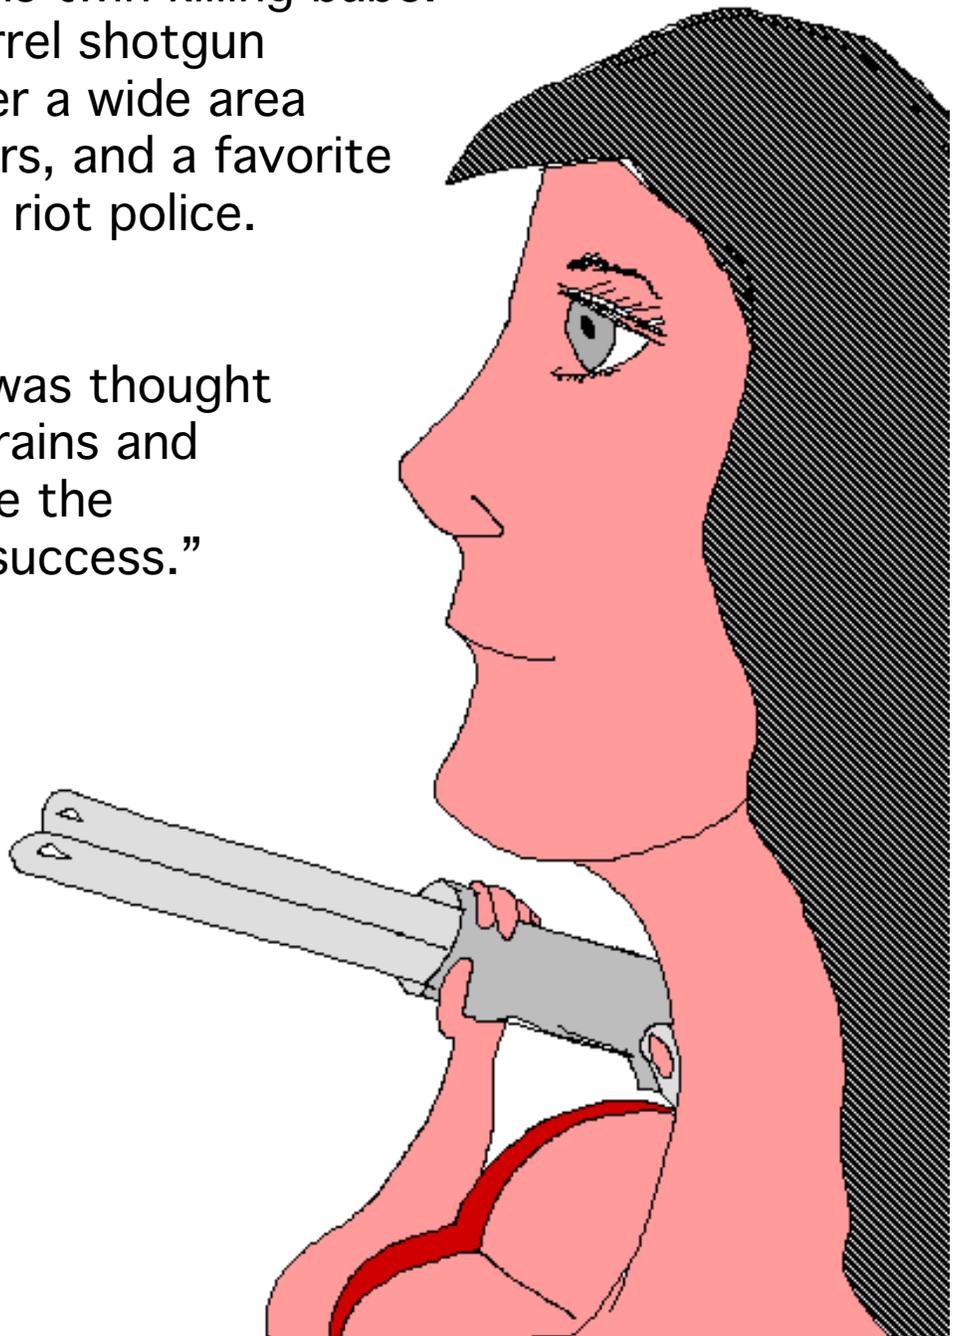

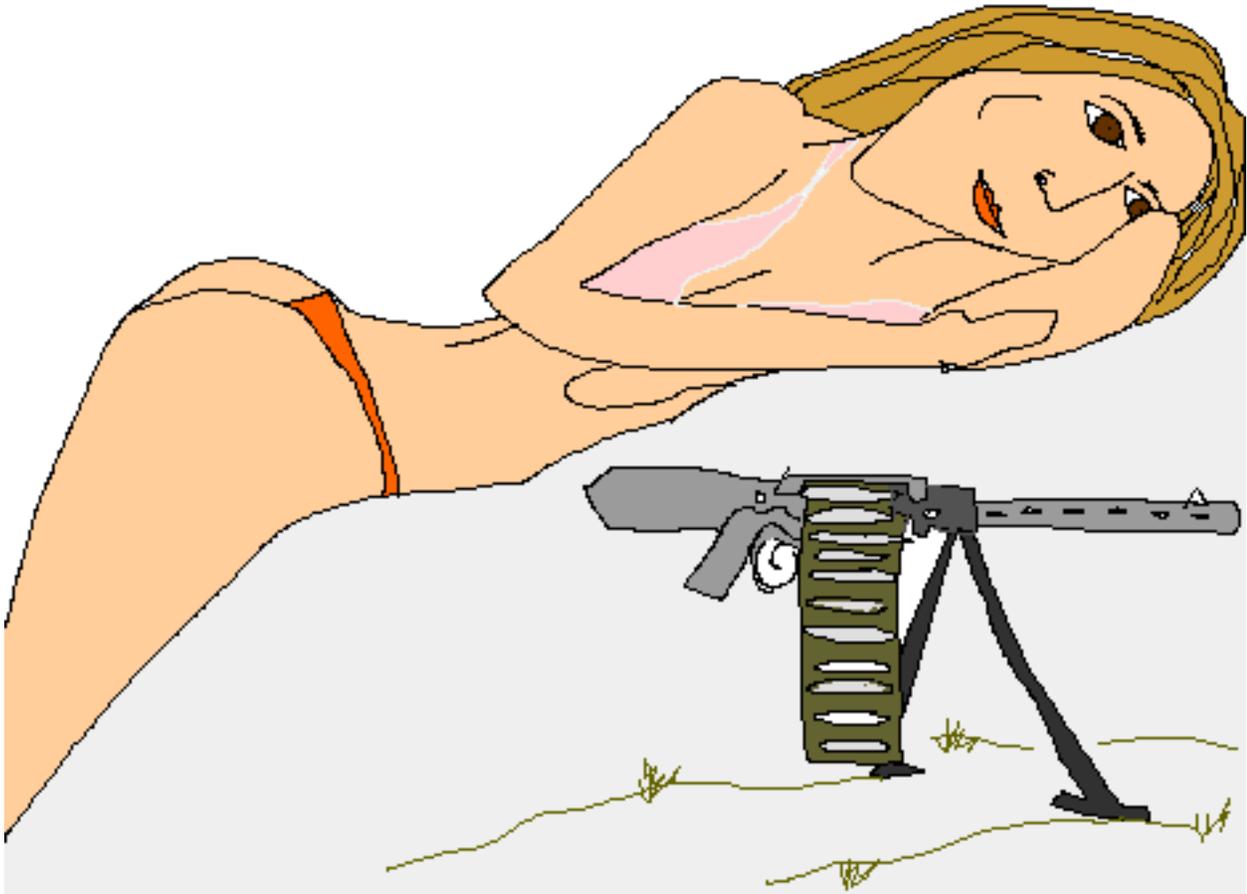

“Di”

You are looking for double-barrel trouble with this twin killing babe. The double barrel shotgun is accurate over a wide area in close quarters, and a favorite of hunters and riot police.

Quote:

“Growing up I was thought that beauty, brains and fire-power were the three keys to success.”

“Bertie”

This German lass has a fondness for antiques, like this World War II M42-43 machine gun with multi-firing standard. Like the bullet belt, her top is see-through.

Quote: “Ya, dez is uber goode.”

“Mora”

She has the bright color look of the new fabrics and materials to hold the beach all day and night, with or without her portable mortar launcher.

Quote: “It’s not the size of the shell, but the punch it packs that counts with me.”

“Shelley”

In her coral clam shell top,
she is ready to capture the most wanted with her Police .38 Special.

Quote: “As long as he is still on the loose, I have a job to do; to bring him to his knees.”

How the one and only SWIM SHOOT Issue came together is really no mystery. A few dozen Mai Tais, the hot sun, a crowded beach and some imagination (heavy on the gin)-- you have a publication worthy of the magazine racks of the strip malls and gas stations of America. This is probably not politically correct, but the minds of most American men today are on two things: women and guns, while the women of this country are most concerned about fashion and fire-power. We are not that far a part since we are technically at war, and this is protected satire. Get it? Look it up in the dictionary if you don't get it right away. It's the big book with all the words in alphabetical order.
